

BRIGHT LEARN COFFEE SHOP SALES

Agenda:

- Total revenue per month
- Total revenue per product type
- Peak time interval for sales
- Quantity of items sold
- Best selling products

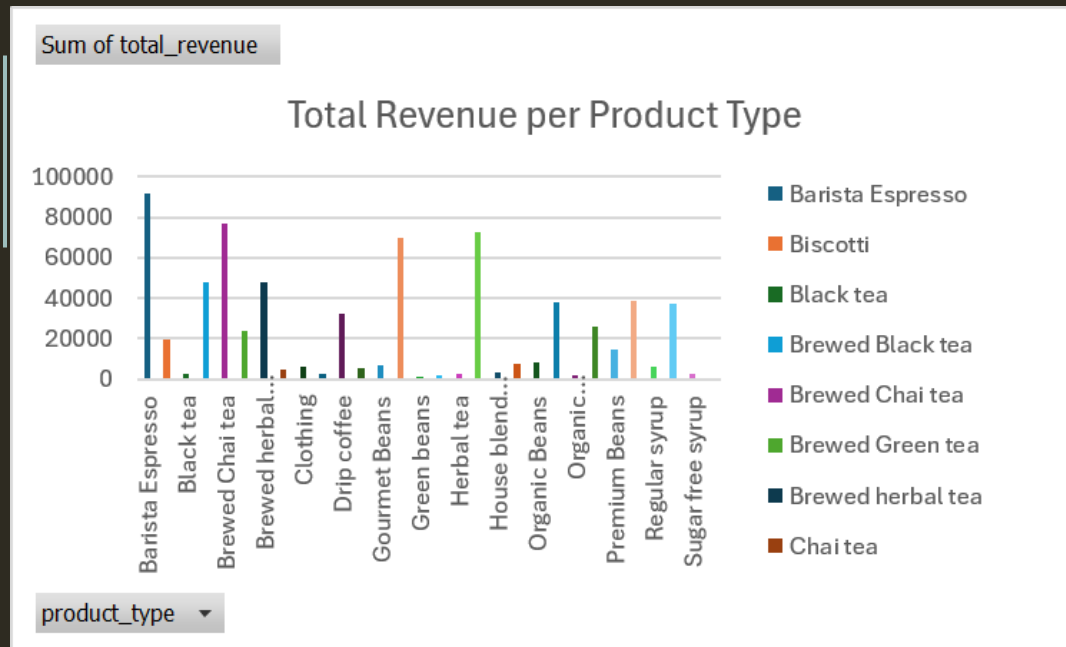

Recommendations:

- Investigate the February decline to determine if it was caused by seasonality, operational issues or reduced demand.
- Analyze the factors behind the strong May and June performance and identify what contributed to the growth.
- Replicate the successful sales, marketing, customer acquisition, or operational initiatives that drove revenue increase.

Key Insights

- Revenue shows a strong upward trend, growing from R81.7k in Jan to R166.5K in June, more than doubling over six-month period.
- February was the only month with a decline compared to January dropping by 6.8%.
- March to May experienced the strongest growth, indicating a significant improvement in business performance.
- June achieved the highest revenue at R166.5k, confirming sustained growth.

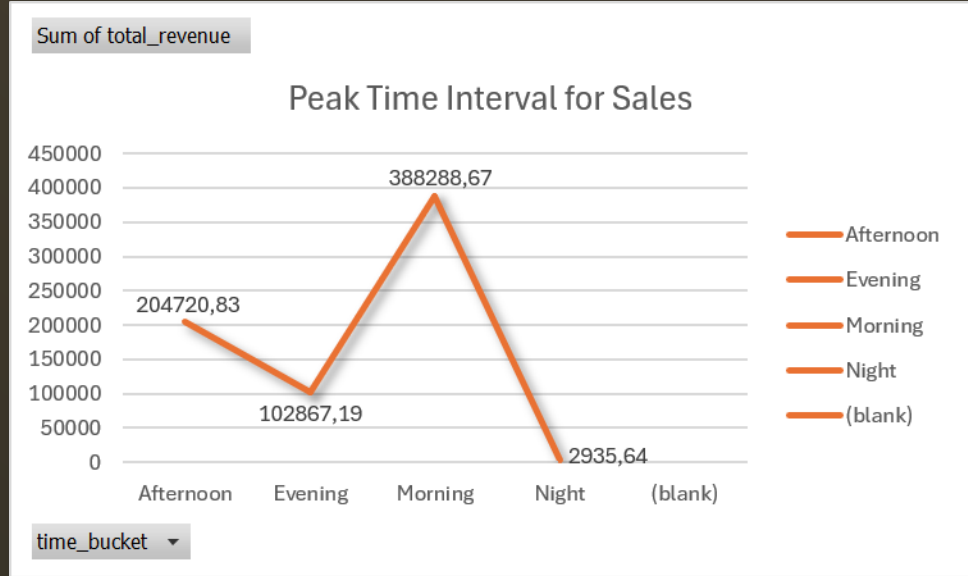

Key Insights

- Barista Espresso is the top performing product, generating R91,406.20, making it the strongest revenue contributor.
- Some products such as (Green Beans – R1,340, Green Tea – R1,470.75, Organic Chocolate – R1,679.60) are underperforming significantly.
- Some tea products perform well, especially Brewed White Tea and Brewed Black Tea, while others such as Green Tea, Herbal Tea and Chai Tea are much weaker.

Recommendations:

- Increase stock, visibility and promotion for the highest revenue products to avoid missed sales opportunities.
- Investigate low performing products to understand whether poor sales are caused by low demand, pricing and limited visibility.
- Bundle strong and weak products together to improve sales of lower performing items.

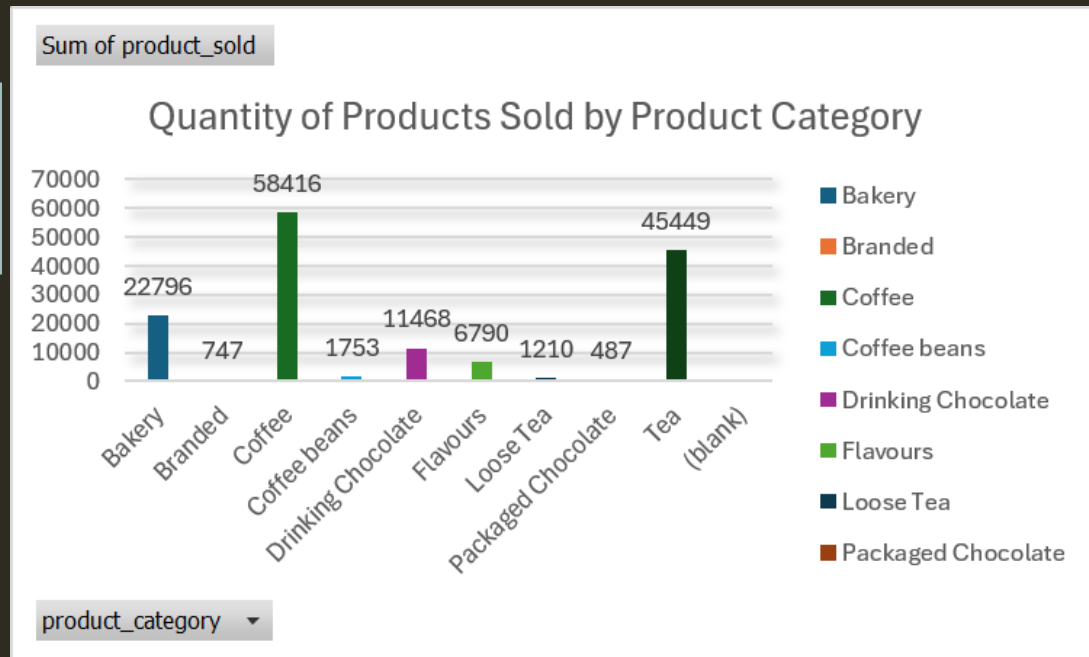

Key Insights

- Morning is the strongest sales period generating R388,288.67, which is the highest revenue contribution.
- Afternoon is the second-best performing period, contributing R204,720.83.
- Evening sales are moderate.
- Night sales are extremely low.
- The sales pattern suggest that customer demand is strongest earlier in the day , especially during the morning trading window.

Recommendations:

- Prioritize staffing and stock availability in the morning, as this is peak revenue period.
- Use the afternoon period to sustain sales through promotions, upselling and buddle offers.
- Run targeted evening promotions to grow sales after the afternoon peak, such as combo deals, loyalty offers or discounted selected items.

Key Insights

- Coffee and Tea are the dominant product categories driving most of the sales volume.
- Bakery also performs strongly and can be used to increase basket size through bundled offers.

Recommendations:

- Lower performing categories should be reviewed to determine whether they need better promotions, repositioning, bundling.
- Protect the strong performing categories while using targeted actions to improve sales of weaker categories.

Key Insights

- Sales are driven mainly by ready to drink beverages, with Brewed Chai Tea, Gourmet Brewed Coffee, and Barista Espresso leading the product sales.
- Bakery products support overall performance, while several packaged or low volume products contribute very little.

Recommendations:

- Protect stock and promotion of the best sellers while reviewing low performing products for improvement.
